Ecclesiastical Troubles in Tennessec---An Episcopal Minister Declines to Shake Hands with his Bishop, and is Censured by the State Convention.

[Abridged from the Memphis Avala | che, 2 to.]

For several years past a misunderstanding has existed between Right Rev. C. T. Quintard, bishop of the die cese of Tennessee, and Rev. Dr. Rich ard Hines, for several years rector of St. Mary's Church, now known as the Cathedral. The latter felt himself personally aggrieved by the course pursued by the Bishop with reference to him in several matters ecclesiastical: and though the existence of the differences was well known to the Memphis clergy and many of the laity, it was not until yesterday that the trouble got into the columns of the newspapers and became public property. It appears that on Tuesday the Bishop met Dr. Hines, after the day's session of the State Convention now being held here, and with the view of effecting a reconciliation offered his praying for a commutation of the death | hand. Superior Court. Court met yesterday morning at 10 clock, and the trial of the three men from Duplin county, charged with arson, was resumed.

Thomas Kornegay, the first witness who was called to the stand, gave in a version of the outrage which was very nearly the same with that published by us yesterday. Being cross-examined he stated that he had been to Mr. Rogers' once and got a chunk of fire to burn Mrs. Bason's fences, but that Rogers stopped him. He stated then that Wilson and Branch had frightened him and told him he must do it. He was scared then and had been all the time and was yet. He thought the crib was one hundred and fifty feet from the house.

Other witnesses were called up to prove slight circumstances. Loftin saw Branch and Mintzy going dong the road just before dark in the direction of Branch's house and Mrs. Bason's. Mintzy carried a short army r fle and Branch a shot gun. Col. Cobb was with the party that arrested Mintzy and Branch at the house of McLaurin, 4 miles from Fayetteville.
